

```
if (document.addEventListener) { document.addEventListener("DOMContentLoaded", window.print(), false); } // for Internet Explorer (using conditional comments) /@cc_on @/ /*@if (@_win32) document.write(""); var script = document.getElementById("__ie_onload");
script.onreadystatechange = function() { if (this.readyState == "complete") { window.print();
// call the onload handler } }; /@end @/
```

Trust and Big Government?

What Exactly!

Posted by: admin in Untagged on Jan 25, 2010

It is shocking to me that on both sides of the political scene you have people state that you cannot trust politicians. So, my question is to the folks that support big government, if you feel that way why would you ask a government to take over car companies, healthcare and banking if they cannot be trusted? My suggestion is that we quit talking just to be heard and slow down and think of the ramifications that big government has on all of us as the people of the United States of America. If that statement is true, then would it not make sense to have a limited government? A government that should be responsible to provide a free market, and a government that should focus on national security instead of trying to trample the private sector. What are your thoughts?

